DESCRIPTION

Imagine if, at a childhood birthday party, your parents surprised you with a candy-stuffed cannon instead of a piñata and let you light it off, spewing treats, like falling stars, upon your giddy friends. 'Best birthday EVER!' you'd surely shout. Now, let's say someone was able to capture that feeling of awe and glee in music: thunderously loud and so fun you'd hyperventilate. That band would be Ponytail: a baby-faced foursome of bright, noodly guitars, thrashed drums, otherworldly mewling, and an ineffable joyousness that bubbles up like pop rocks in a glass of cola.

As tight as they are freaked, strange as they are accessible, Ponytail will froth your spirit into shape. Featuring Dustin Wong of the recently acclaimed Ecstatic Sunshine and garnering favorable national press even before the release of this debut, Ponytail bursts like Roman Candles shot loud and proud from the weirdo spazzcataz percolator of Baltimore's warehouse party scene.

SELLING POINTS

"Because guitars can still beat up computers"

— Martin De Leon II, XLR8R Magazine

"Hooky, athletic choogling is their game, and they play to win — lightning solos beget even faster lightning solos beget some shit that'd make Yes blush."

— Jessica Hopper, Chicago Reader

"...thick, sheeny guitars that burst into flurries of top-speed riffing, but vocalist Molly Siegel's post-verbal outbursts, which recall animals from all over the Wild Kingdom, are what really sends this record over the edge..."
