ARTIST BIO

Guitarist Casey Harvey had been pestering Rachel Tracy about forming a band for years. She finally relented in the summer of 2005, agreeing to play bass, and they recruited vocalist/guitarist Anna Conner during a pickup baseball game and drummer Ryan Sterner shortly thereafter. Having cut their teeth in the formative Baltimore all-ages indie scene of the mid-nineties, they were itching to make meaningful music again. Several practice sessions in, they realized there was real chemistry and Thrushes was born.

DESCRIPTION

Thrushes debut album, "Sun Come Undone" was released in March 2007 to glowing critical reviews. Drawing inspiration from Phil Spector's girl groups to art rock icons like Sonic Youth, Thrushes music straddles the line between classic pop hooks and moody noise soundscapes while always maintaining the emotional soul of rock and roll.

Thrushes hit single "Heartbeats" was an instant classic and one of the 10 most blogged songs in the world for the week of March 30th according to venerable blog aggregator elbo.ws.

The band put out an open call to all their friends and fans to remix the track and the response was overwhelming. There were no firm guidelines and the remixers were free use as much or as little of the original track as they wished.

"Heartbeats Remixed" covers a wide range of stylistic ground from the Happy Monday's baggy tinged "Manchester Reunited Mix" to the John Hughes' inspired "DtheNextLevel Mix". Contributors include professional DJ's, sound alchemists, and bedroom sonic reducers.

The enhanced cd also includes the stunning "Heartbeats" video directed by the renowned playwright and director Kevin Doyle of the Sponsored By Nobody theater company.

Selling Points:

- Thrushes have performed alongside The Raveonettes, XIU XIU, Rasputina, Man Man, Two if by Sea, Casiotone for the Painfully Alone, A Place to Bury Strangers, and are hard at work on their next full length for Winter 2008 release.
